The . . . Jefferson

RICHMOND,
VIRGINIA

AFTER two seasons this magnificent structure has become one of the great attractions of the South and a powerful inducement to the great army of tourists to turn their steps in the direction of Richmond. The many railroads converging at this point, also the fact that it is a half-way station for tourists on their way North and South, have made it evident that it is not only a hotel in the ordinary sense of the term for the accommodation of travelers and transient visitors to the city, but a resort, offering all the attractions to be found in the Northern hotels during summer and in the Southern hotels during winter, and tourists find it agreeable to stop and enjoy the equable climate of the location for a number of weeks or months when traveling either way, thus avoiding extreme changes of temperature. The hotel is located in the best residential portion of Richmond, between Main and Franklin streets, and occupies half a block between Jefferson and Adams streets, the grade between Main and Franklin forming one of the distinctive features of the interior in separating the business portion of the hotel from the social end, the two being connected by a grand stairway affording a most pleasing effect.

The Jefferson is an entirely new building, constructed in the most substantial manner of brick and terra cotta, is on high ground and has plenty of light and air, and accommodations for 500. It is a model of convenience in all its appointments and is planned to give the greatest amount of home comfort to those seeking it from every direction—its chambers being furnished luxuriously and tastefully with this object in view.

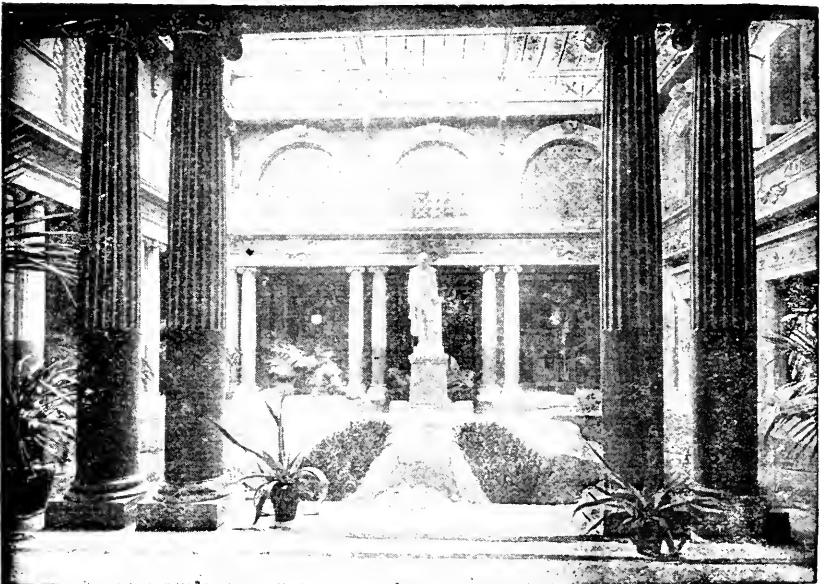

The space devoted to the use of the public consists of two great courts, around the lower one of which is clustered the Business Office, Western Union Telegraph, Long Distance Telephone, Railroad Ticket Office, Writing Room, News and Cigar Booths, Smokers' Hall, Billiard Room, Grill, Wine Rooms and Drug Store, and in the upper one, surrounded by a wide arcade supported by great columns is the Ladies' Cafe and three retiring parlors opening into a grass-covered Court, through which run marble walks flanked by palms and hedges, in the centre of which is a more than life-size marble statue of Thomas Jefferson, from which the hotel takes its name. Leading from the Court is the Marble Hall, one of the most brilliant rooms of modern architecture, to the left of which, entering from Franklin street, is the Pink Reception Parlor and the Grand Salon, while to the right is the Blue Reception Parlor and Library.

Hotel Loggia.

The grandeur of the Salon, Reception Rooms and Library with their luxurious furniture, carpets, pictures and bric-a-brac is only exceeded by the rare harmony of colors and tastes in their selection.

At the extreme southern end of the hotel, reached by a beautifully carpeted corridor, is the Dining Hall, one of the stateliest and most dignified rooms ever constructed for this purpose, and directly above on the roof is one of the most complete roof gardens in this country, with ample stage made brilliant by hundreds of electric lights.

Turkish, Russian, Roman and Electric Baths can be had in all their luxury on the office floor.

Transient rates on the American plan, five dollars and upwards per day, according to location.

Rooms on the European plan, one dollar and fifty cents and upwards per day.

The City of Richmond, with its wealth of historic memories of three great wars, is well worth a visit from all who are interested in National greatness and take pride in the achievements of all Americans.

Court

Beautiful suburban drives stretch out in all directions, including the National road built by the United States Government, and the Brook Turnpike leading to Lakeside Park, with its Golf Links, Zoo and other attractions. Guides to all the noted Battlefields and historic points furnished at short notice.

Connected with the Hotel is one of the finest liveries south of New York.
